

THE AEGEAN SEA SPEAKS ITS PIECE

Those who see—most can't see how blue I am, how green.

When the sun escapes the sky,

wine-dark me. When the moon silences gulls who count

sand, most don't see what I see, what isn't dark—or

me. Who can translate me to me.